Foellinger Foundation reopens building with meeting space for nonprofits

Foellinger Foundation announces the reopening of its building after a renovation. Meeting spaces are available for use by Allen County nonprofits at no cost.

“Helene originally envisioned our building as a place where nonprofits collaborate and ideate ways to create opportunities for Allen County residents,” said David Bennett, Interim President. “We are thrilled to meet her vision.”

The renovation began in April of 2022. Updates include a refinished lower level, six open meeting and collaboration spaces and four private meeting spaces. These spaces are available to Allen County nonprofit staff and leaders for one-on-one meetings, board meetings, group meetings, retreats, and more.

Nonprofits interested in utilizing a meeting space should review the policies and guidelines before submitting a request on the Foellinger Foundation website.
